

GO To Sunday - School Next Sunday

Maxwell Cars Sell.

The Central Garage sold this week, a Maxwell runabout to the Garrard Milling Co., and a touring car of the same make to Jones L. Anderson, of Frencheville.

Mat Cohen Sick.

Confined to his bed with a severe attack of tonsilitis, Mr. Mat Cohen was unable to fill his engagement to speak here last Monday. He hopes to be able to address the farmers of Garrard County later.

Pie Supper.

There will be a pie supper at Hedges School house on the evening of May 9th. The proceeds of this supper goes to the benefit of this school and everybody is cordially invited. Don't forget the date, Friday evening May 9th.

Gifts Go To Brazil.

An export firm will ship to Brazil, a carload of Hedges gifts bought in the Bluegrass of Kentucky. It is expected that this initial shipment will pave the way for many more red bags to go to South America from the "dark and bloody ground".

Fine Farm SELLS.

Mr. W. R. Cook sold his farm on the new Hedges road last Friday to Mr. J. I. Hamilton of this place. The farm is one of the best in the county, well improved and contains about 116 acres. The price paid was $300.00 an acre and possession will be given next January.

District Convention.

The C. W. B. M. Auxiliaries and the Sabbath schools of the Fifth district, will hold their district convention in the Christian church at Lancaster beginning on the evening of May the 12th and closing on the evening of the 13th.

A hearty welcome is extended to those who will come.

Big Hog Sale.

Mr. J. L. Hutchens, of Danville, came over last Monday and purchased 104 head of hogs to B. Swinburne that averaged 220 pounds each, for which he paid $10.00 a hundred or a total of $1,258.30. Mr. Hutchens tells us that in his twenty-five years as a dealer, this is the highest price he ever paid for one car load of hogs.

Buys New Car.

A local agency sold yesterday to Arthur Henley, one of our leading and worthy citizens, a handsome 4 passenger Liverland automobile, the owner residing near town. Arthur is an upright and prosaic man. In every drive for war bonds he has subscribed liberally, and he enjoys the respect of the community in which he lives.

Jewish Relief Fund.

Those who have not contributed to the Jewish Relief Fund are asked to leave their contributions with Mr. Adolph Joseph, who will see that it is forwarded to the proper authorities.

This is one of the most worthy causes which the people of Garrard county have been asked to contribute to and it is hoped that they will do their duty in this noble work.

Clay Bought Purebreds.

Henry Clay did much to bring purebred live stock into Kentucky when he farmed at his home, Ashland, just outside of Lexington. The following extract from a letter written to Adam Beatty, June 18, 1854, explains himself:

"I have lately purchased in Washington County, Penn., fifty head of Merino ewes, the choice out of 400, part of one of the finest flocks in the country. There are about 100 or 120 lambs with them and I suppose an equal portion of rams."

Death Claims Infant.

On the evening of April 21st, the gates of Heaven opened wide to receive the soul of little Georgia May Centers, aged 9 months, daughter and the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Centers. She was the light of her home, and the center of attraction of her fond grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Conn. "God has gathered one of the fairest flowers out of the garden of our hearts" to bloom more perfect in heaven.

Funeral service was held at the Presbyterian church, conducted by Rev. Eldridge, and the little body tenderly laid to rest in the Old Paint Lick cemetery.

COURT DAY CROWD SENATOR-ELECT

Small and Little Business Done.

What used to be known as "horse show day" in Garrard county is the fourth Monday in April, but few horses were on display here last Monday. Robert Fox showed his fast stallion, Auto Zambra and he attracted much attention. He is the fastest horse that ever made a season south of the Kentucky river. It is Haldom's horse "High Cloud" made a good show as did Black Pat shown by Virgil Gasterman. Claude Clegg showed his saddle stallion, Rex, by Rex Arbuckle and had many admirers. The handsome Percheron stallion, Sampson, owned by P. E. Foley, was a handsome specimen of this type and was the center of attraction for some time.

At all the cattle were on the market and all sold at good prices. A few saddle horses changed hands. Venetian and Latton buying a fine gelding mare of J. M. Craig for $100.

Baptist Church.

Sunday is "Go to Sunday School Day." We urge all Baptist in our community to be with us on that day, and invite all others who may wish to come. A welcome awaits you at the Baptist church.

Sunday School at 10 o'clock.

Preaching at 11 o'clock, on the subject "A Place Better Than Heaven" at 11 A. M. Miss Laverne Dickerson has charge of the program.

Evening Worship, 8 o'clock, subject "The Democracy of God".

Eight Banks Boost.

Jefferson County, Ky., has eight banks and the Board of Trade boosting and financing the Boys' and Girls' club work. For two years, six banks at various points in the county have been furnishing money for the purchase of pure-bred pigs.

The Louisville Board of Trade has also been loaning money without interest for several years. This year two of the big banks in Louisville have followed suit. This makes eight banks and a great commercial body all interested in pushing the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture in its huge work of educating boys and girls in the feeding and care of purebred live stock.

Grange Sells Stock.

Church Hill Grange in Christian County, Kentucky, has lately held one of its very successful cooperative live stock sales. The members disposed of about $100,000 worth of stock in one day.

This grange has been in active operation since 1873 and is probably the best example of community organization to be found in Kentucky. Its social days, when men, women and children come for all day, with a sumptuous dinner in baskets, are noted. The women of the grange sell their eggs, chickens and turkeys cooperatively.

Last season the women marketed 500 turkeys through this strong organization at 3 cents over the regular market price.

Antique Shop.

It may interest those who have heretofore sent their antique pieces to other towns to be restored that Mr. J. A. Tucker is devoting much of his time to refurbishing old furniture, and will be very glad to have visitors to his shop on Danville Street, just below the post office to look at his work. This spring he has returned to his patrons from his shop a number of interesting restored pieces, but now has on exhibit other pieces of his own hand work; one which has especially interested callers is a kitchen cupboard which has been transformed into a cabinet, or book case with glass doors & grill work. This piece especially shows Mr. Tucker's skill being both quaint and cogent. Mr. Tucker has in him the blood of old craftsmen, having at his shop a piece of Gobney with mica, done by his great great grandfather, one Mallory, of Lincoln county, and those who have seen the old furniture and interior wood-work that embellish the pioneer houses of Lincoln know how skillful were the joiners and cabinet makers of those days.

Our philosopher says: You can sometimes cheat folks an' get by with it; but you can't rob the land you farm an' not pay the bill sooner or later.

SENATOR-ELECT

STANLEY

To Serve Out Term As Governor.

A Washington telegram says: It is reported here that Senator-elect A. O. Stanley, of Kentucky, and Senator-elect Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey, are arranging a senatorial tour under the terms of which both will continue to serve as governors of their respective states until their gubernatorial terms expire. Stanley's term as governor of Kentucky will expire next December and Edge's term as governor of New Jersey will end next January. Stanley is a Democrat and Edge is a Republican. The alleged agreement simply would mean that Kentucky and New Jersey would be represented in the Senate by one senator each until next January. The political control of the Senate would not be of any way altered, however, owing to the fact that they are of opposite political faiths. It is said the reasons why the two desire to serve out their terms as governors are very much the same and are founded on a desire to prevent control of their states going to antagonistic factions.

SOFT DRINK TAX ON TO-DAY.

Only Bottled Beverages Exempt. Restaurants Not Affected.

Washington, April 29 (Associated Press) — Soda water, ice cream, sundaes, root beer and all other soda fountain drinks become taxable Thursday under the revenue act. Five and ten-cent drinks or dishes will be taxed one cent, while fifteen or twenty-cent drinks will be taxed two cents, and the tax will be collected from the purchaser, unless the soda fountain keeper chooses to reduce his prices to include the extra tax item.

The question of when drinks are taxable and when they may not be taxable and the precise methods of collecting the tax were discussed at length in a statement issued to-day by the Internal Revenue Bureau for guidance of proprietors and patrons of soda fountains.

Bottled Beverages Exempt.

These examples were given of taxable drinks when mixed and sold at the fountain for consumption on the premises.

Orangeade, lemonade, pineapple juice, coca-cola, root beer, mojito, phosphates, fruit and flavoring syrups mixed with carbonated water or plain water, milk shakes, melted milk shakes, cream and egg shakes, ice cream, ice cream sodas, sundaes, ice cream sandwiches, flavored ices.

These drinks are not taxable: Hot beef tea, coffee, tea, buttermilk, milk, hot chocolate, hot clam broth, tomato-bouillon and bottled drinks sold direct from the container. Separate manufacturers' taxes are imposed on drinks of the latter class.

No Tax On Cafe Drinks.

Ice cream is not taxable when sold in containers to be carried away from selling place to be eaten. Ice cream cones are taxable. Bremo-solzer, Kochelle salts, scillite powders, castor oil, epsom salts and similar medicines often served at soda fountains are not subject to the tax.

Soft drink stands or push cart enterprises are subject to the tax, but restaurants or other places serving ice cream or soft drinks as an incidental feature of the business are not required to collect or to pay the tax.

Church "socials" and clubs are exempt, but booths at country fairs, circuses or bull games must collect the tax.

A Scheme For Raising Revenue To Build Roads.

Mr. James M. Weathers, Cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Elizabethtown, Kentucky, has mapped out a system of roads for Todd County and he proposes to get one thousand men of the County to agree to donate $100.00 per year for a sufficient of years to build the proposed system.

$100,000.00 would be available each year from his plan in addition to the regular county road fund.

He states that he has laid the matter before three hundred men and every one has agreed to it and the success of the scheme seems assured.

ENORMOUS

WAS THE THRONG IN LANCASTER LAST

THURSDAY.

AEROPLANE, ARMY TANK AND MUSIC THRILL THE SPECTATORS.

SOLDIER BOYS GIVEN HEARTY WELCOME.

CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS.

Electrical Baths Being Installed. Other Improvements Under Way.

It will be very gratifying to friends and patrons of the famous Crab Orchard Springs to learn that many improvements are being made there this spring. In fact they are now installing first class baths and will enter to the ills of nervous and rheumatic troubles, in fact any troubles that can be cured by heat, baths and electricity. The system will probably be completed by the middle of May, at which time patients will be cured for just as they would be at French Lick or Martinsville.

Dr. F. E. Peck, who has had a number of years of practical experience, with treatments of this character, will be in charge and under his supervision will be trained men and women for nurses.

We understand that about $5,000 is being expended on these improvements. A card to "Mr. Willis" will get an immediate reply, giving you all the information desired.

ABERDEEN-ANGUS SALE.

Attracting Interest over Whole Country.

The Bradshaw Aberdeen-Angus cattle sale which is held for May 16th, is attracting notice throughout Kentucky and Messrs Bradshaw tell us they are receiving letters every day asking for catalogues.

An analysis of this herd from an individual and collective standpoint reveals that it is great consignment, where merit and quality is seen at its best where blood of the most fashionable character is to be found in the pedigree.

A state record sale in Iowa of this character, averaged $1625.00 on 56 head.

The first sale of F. J. Roberts' herd of Aberdeen-Angus at Atlantic, Iowa, featured the sale of Epistles, grand champion Angus bull at the 1918 International, to L. B. Canum, of Aledo, Ill., for $15,200, the highest price ever paid for an Angus in this country, and equalling or beating the Scotch record of 2,800 guineas, depending on how the exchange rate is figured.

The Kentucky University Fund, containing twenty men, furnished the parade of several hundred soldiers and added materially to the pleasure of the day.

The pleasure of feeding the soldiers was carried out generously by the local members of the Red Cross, ample provisions being served, both sumptuously and methodically. The address of welcome was made by Judge L. L. Walker, who did it in his own eloquent way, his address being made from the steps of the park, the court house would not begin to hold the crowd that listened to his splendid remarks.

Dr. W. A. Garfield also addressed the people, but unfortunately, when about half through his talk, the aeroplane passed over mid of course the crowd's attention was immediately diverted.

Taking it all in all it was a great day for Lancaster and Garrard County and one that will be long remembered.

Appreciated.

We wish hereby to express our appreciation and cordial thanks to the local chapter of the Red Cross for the courtesies extended to the colored soldiers who participated in the exercises of the Victory Loan parade of last Thursday.

QUOTA NOT REACHED.

Garrard County Must Not Fail. $130,000 Subscribed.

The Victory Liberty Loan which opened here last Thursday has not reached its quota in Garrard county and up to last night only $130,000 had been subscribed. The quota for the county is $198,050 and those who know say that Garrard county must not and will not fail to go "over the top". These notes are the most attractive form of investment that the Government has ever offered. The interest rate of 4 3/4 per cent is the highest yet offered; the term of four years and perhaps only three years to run, means that these notes are going to remain around par or perhaps go higher.

We created this war debt so let us pay it off. You paid the transportation across the sea for these boys who fought for the safety of your home and family, now its up to us to pay their way back home.

If you have been solicited or have not yet subscribed for some of these bonds, go to the headquarters in the office of the Chairman in the Court House or call at your bank and make your subscriptions.

The patriotism of Garrard county must and shall not die. Let's finish the job this week and keep GARRARD'S name on the ROLL OF HONOR.

REVIVAL CLOSES

After Successful Meeting.

The Methodist revival which has been in progress for the past two weeks closed Tuesday night, which showed increased interest up to the last service. Rev. Bridgers made many friends while here and will always receive a hearty welcome should he ever return to Lancaster. The Union services last Sunday morning were especially interesting; all of the churches of the city, uniting in this service which was especially devoted to the older people of the city and county. Rev. Palmer has worked faithfully throughout the series of meetings and to him is due much credit for the good that will surely result from such a meeting.

These meetings have done a great deal of good in bringing the community together in religious cooperation. While not primarily planned as a union meeting, yet it soon became such in spirit at least. All denominations took part in it.

Mr. Bridgers preached to large crowds in the school auditorium each night. The day services at the Methodist Church were deeply spiritual and inspiring.

Thanks are due every one who assisted in any way in the meeting. The following are due worthy mention: The pastors of all the churches, Prof. Hopkins and the school board, the men who served as ushers during the whole meeting, the ladies who acted as ushers at the Old Folks' service, the ladies who furnished flowers, those who helped decorate the auditorium, those who played the piano, those who helped with the singing, those in charge of the finances, and those who contributed of their means.

Special thanks are due the Christian and Presbyterian churches for the offer of the use of their buildings during the meeting. Doubtless, the same offer would have been made by the Baptist church, had their building been larger.

Quite a number came forward and gave their hands to Mr. Bridgers in token of the fact that they were determined to lend better and more consecrated lives. Seven gave their names for church membership. Others may follow. Many had their spiritual life quickened.

Mr. Bridgers went from here to North Carolina, to deliver an address May 1, on the Victory Liberty Loan. He expects to return to Kentucky next week and engage in union revival services at Jackson.

NOTICE To Our Patrons

The management of the Bastin Telephone Company has been informed that the committee appointed by the City Council to prepare and present a franchise for its consideration will have its work completed and ready for the franchise to be read for the first time on Monday night, May 5, 1919. These gentlemen appointed to represent the people will have a contract to offer, we assume, that will be acceptable to the public and fully protect the public interest. The rates charged heretofore in Lancaster for telephone service have not met the expenses necessary to operate a telephone system although administered in the most economical way possible. This Company has lost money in its Lancaster business for a number of years and this loss has constantly grown and especially rapid since war conditions have caused the high price in telephone equipment of all kinds.

We state, without the fear of contradiction that the Bastin Telephone Company is the only telephone company in the State of Kentucky that has operated a telephone exchange for any length of time under conditions similar to Lancaster for the small sum of one dollar per month for residence and business telephones. We think the just public of Lancaster now unanimously concede that any telephone company doing business in this City ought to have the right to charge fair and reasonable rates for telephone service and that this City and County should have a first class telephone system. This is impossible without adequate rates charged by the operating company. In fixing a telephone rate to be charged under this franchise the public and the officials of Lancaster will keep in mind that of all commodities on the market there has not been a larger increase in price in any in the past five years than in telephone equipment.

The Bastin Telephone Company will be a bidder for the franchise offered provided the rates are adequate to pay a reasonable return on the capital invested in the telephone business in Lancaster and Garrard County. The Company anticipates the experienced officials of the City fully realize the conditions of business now existing and will fix a living rate in the franchise offered. This Company will continue to give good service to its patrons as heretofore stated.

Very Respectfully,

Bastin Telephone Co.

Miss Mattie Lutes, Sec'y and Treas.

J.W.Creech, President.

A MATTER OF HYGIENE.

It would be malicious to suggest that the government has levied a tax upon young boys, secure in the knowledge that this could be done with impunity. Boys under twenty-one do not vote, so that there is no danger of retaliation at the polls.

We do not take such an extreme view. The government has merely acted from inadvertence; but none the less it is up to the government to bring about a slight readjustment, if possible.

To put a tax upon sporting goods used by youngsters was an error of the venial kind. The government has enough to do at all times, and lately has had rather more than enough to do. Faced at every turn with the necessity of determining fundamental questions of policy at the shortest notice it has found little time to devote to matters where fundamentals are not involved. Hence the injudicious tax on sporting goods.

There is no reason why a tax should not be levied on a certain class of these articles. It takes very slight acumen to differentiate between goods of the kind that are merely luxuries used by the very wealthy and the essentials of healthy exercise necessary to bodily growth. A polo mallet is not likely to be purchased by a bricklayer's son. A baseball bat is.

There is wisdom in the principle that unnecessary diversions should yield revenue to the state. We find it in the tax on movie tickets. But the health giving exercise of children is more than a diversion. It is as necessary as food and clothing.

OUR RETURNING SOLDIERS.

Throughout the country our soldiers are making their way to their home towns. And complaints are made that in many places they are received with little enthusiasm.

We do not believe that the lack of enthusiasm comes from any lack of feeling. Americans are not given to expressing their emotions. The American youth is trained to repression and self-control, and the result of this training remains with the adult.

But when soldiers come home is the time, if ever, to give expression to our feelings. These young men have risked everything in the service of their country. They have endured discomfort and suffering and peril for our protection. They come with the stripes of honorable service and honorable discharge upon their sleeves.

Let us greet them with the heartiest of welcomes. The small town cannot give its returning heroes triumphal arches and wonderful music and great parades. The more need that we should show them the depth of our feelings, our enduring pride in them, and our joy in their return. Let the time of their homecoming be a time that they will always remember with satisfaction and happiness.

PERMANENT
AEROPLANE

Landing Field To Be Established in Garrard.

Necessary Papers Filed and Temporary Field Selected.

Since Lancaster has been placed on the map as an "Aerial Landing place" temporarily as was the case last Thursday, steps have been taken to have here a permanent landing field and Mr. John M. Farra tells us that the proper papers have been filed with the authorities at Camp Knox and Lancaster will be on the aerial map.

Mr. A. B. Brown who kindly consented for the landing of the aeroplane on his beautiful farm on the Stanford pike, has agreed that the place can be used temporarily until another site has been selected. Mr. Farra has consented to donate such a place as soon as the wheat crop is harvested, which will be one mile nearer town and just along the ready way.

Last Sunday's Courier Journal contained a map of the various towns visited by the aeroplanes during the Liberty Loan drive, and in speaking of the permanent maps being placed over the state said:

"After assuming command of Godman Field on March 5, Col. Reynolds was instrumental in initiating two movements which undoubtedly will do much toward promotion of aviation, both commercial and otherwise, namely, an aerial photographic map of a large section of the State, as well as a plan for organizing the entire State in a movement for a system of aerial routes, by numbering towns a certain distance apart, along with the preparation of landing fields in every county.

In connection with the present Victory Loan campaign ships from Godman Field have visited sixteen towns in different vicinities, covering approximately 1,700 miles. Landings have been made as often as proper fields were available. Hundreds of pounds of Victory Loan literature have been scattered over large areas. Seventeen other places are on the schedule yet to be visited, which will call for additional mileage of over 2,000 miles.

Maps Are Not Complete.

With the maps now available, cross-country flying is a more or less, and in most cases more, dangerous undertaking. Ordinarily, clouds are to be found at altitudes lower than the height at which it is considered safe to fly over territories unknown to the aviator. Frequently the pilot is unable to properly maintain a course above the clouds, and upon coming down below them he finds that he cannot locate himself on the map. It is then necessary to make a landing to ascertain his position, otherwise he might find himself much further of his course. If the field picked out for a landing does not prove to be a good one, a "crash" is likely to result. If a field cannot be found that looks good, the aviator finds himself forced to land because of a shortage of gasoline.

It is therefore obvious that if various towns would provide a marking numbers coinciding with those on a map being prepared, has been suggested) an aviator would be able to orient himself rapidly and continue on his way toward a known landing field.

It is considered feasible to place a landing field in each county. This can be done with practically no expense. In nearly every community a pasture or meadow sufficiently large for a landing field is easily found. This field should be of firm and level turf, approximately 1,200 feet square (600 feet square might do if nothing better is to be had) and should be free from obstacles such as trees, houses, etc., in or near the field. What little work is to be done, such as clearing brush and small obstacles, will in most cases be volunteered by Boy Scouts' organizations. The marking of a landing field should be a large "T", which should be at least forty feet long by five feet in width.

Landing Fields Needed

The designating numbers towns co-operating in this movement are asked to display should be fifty feet high when possible with no line less than four feet in width, in order that they may readily be seen from high altitudes. These numbers might be made from canvas staked to the ground, laid out in boards painted white, formed of white stones or painted on the roof of a prominent building. If they be placed in the landing field care should be taken that they would not offer an obstruction to a safe landing.

During the present cross-country flights, messages are being dropped to the Mayor of each town selected as the feasible place for a designating point or a landing field, asking these officials to co-operate in this plan to make Kentucky the first State in the Union to institute such a system of "aerial roads".

Whatever landing fields are prepared, or designating numbers displayed, the town will be visited by a photographic plane, photographed and a landing made if possible. These photographs will be sent to Washington, D. C., to become in part of a map showing every landing place in the country. Copies will also be presented to the town's officials for distribution.

With the proper number of landing fields and the proper display of designating points Kentucky should be more traveled by airplane, it is believed, than any other State in the nation.

BONES OF VICTIMS
In Dearborn Massacre
Uncovered At Chicago.

Kentuckians Whose Forefathers Were Killed Interested in Discovery.

Kentuckians whose forefathers were among the early settlers and whose ancestors were among the victims of the scalping knife at the River Raisin and Fort Dearborn, have learned of the discovery of the bones of two persons believed to have been victims at the Fort Dearborn massacre of 1812.

The bones lying on two rude timbered walnut boards, six feet below the surface, were unearthed by excavators on Michigan boulevard, between Lake and South Water streets, in Chicago, recently.

Efforts are being made by Kentuckians interested in the preservation of the remains of Kentuckians to trace identity of the bones and should this be done, it is expected that an appeal will be made to the State of Kentucky to have them taken to Frankfort.

Miss Caroline McIlvaine, librarian of the Historical Society, Chicago, examined the bones and by a process of elimination said they are those of persons killed in the 1812 massacre.

"I cannot say whether they are of man, woman or child, or of white or Indian," she said, "but I would judge that they are the remains of the men found at the site of the massacre and buried in 1813 near the rebuilt fort, by returning troops in 1816, who rebuilt

An account of finding bleached skeletons of the massacre victims and of their burial near the fort, by returning troops in 1816, who rebuilt destroyed fort, is given in a history of Chicago and the Northwest by Mrs. John Kinzie. It is believed that the bodies were interred on boards such as those found.

The Fort Dearborn massacre occurred August 15th, 1812, after the fort had been evacuated and its residents had started on a march to Detroit, where the nearest post was located. "The Snuganash," a half-breed, had preceded the band, run-

At a point now known as Eighth Street, in Chicago, the fleeing little garrison were ambushed in the dunes and practically all of the men killed by the Indians. Most of the women and children escaped through efforts of friendly Indians.

THE NEW DOG LAW UPHELD EXPLAINS IN DETAIL GOOD POINTS OF THE LAW AND SAYS DESIRED RESULTS WILL FOLLOW.

CALLS HAND OF "TAX PAYER" AND ASKS THAT HE LAY ASIDE HIS NON DE PLUME.

Editor of The Central Record,
Lancaster, Kentucky
Dear Sir:

There appeared in The Central Record of March 20th, I believe, an article signed TAX PAYER. The author of this article, manifestly, has only good intentions; but I beg leave, very respectfully, to suggest that he seems to be laboring under some serious misapprehensions as to the origin, provisions, purpose and effect of the new dog law; that certain portions he takes are unsound; and that his well written and evidently well meant article is exceedingly apt to mislead others, as he himself seems to have been misled.

On account of the importance of the matter in issue, I request space in your columns to comment on some of the positions taken by TAX PAYER, to point out the seeming misapprehensions in his mind, and to make a suggestion as to what would be a reasonable attitude for voters generally to take in regard to this law.

LET DOG OWNERS PAY LOSSES.

In the first place, TAX PAYER thinks the present tax exorbitant. He does not object to "a reasonable tax," but thinks that the state should make up any additional amount that might be needed to pay sheep claims.

It is suggested that there are other, seems to have the idea that the practical working of this law is chiefly if not in the nature of a luxury, and that to keep is a necessity, and dogs should be taxed sufficiently to pay in full the damage they do, and that if we must make a choice, it is better to make dogs scarce than to make sheep scarce.

In this connection the fact that the censuses of 1850 and 1910 show that seems to be laboring under some serious misapprehensions as to the origin, provisions, purpose and effect of the new dog law; that certain portions he takes are unsound; and that his well written and evidently well meant article is exceedingly apt to mislead others, as he himself seems to have been misled.

Finally all the suggestions were turned over to a committee of five, composed of the following prominent Kentucky farmers: Dr. R. H. Stevenson of Fayette County, president of the State Sheep Growers Association; Mr. James Weil, of Lexington; Mr. Claude S. Williams, of Woodford County; Mr. Warren M. Meek, of Floyd County, and, in addition to these, the Commissioner of Agriculture.

WHY CLOTHES ARE HIGH.

All these facts may have at least something to do with the fact that wool clothing was never so dear nor ever so inferior as now. In the light of these facts it is suggested that the dollar, or five dollars, dog tax that the poor man with a family pays is only a trifling part of what his dogs are costing him, even if the keep of them costs him absolutely nothing.

In the second place, TAX PAYER

EXONERATES COMMISSIONER.

As an eye witness, I can assure every reader of how little that the idea seemed to be universal in the membership of the State Sheep Growers Association that in order to make the proposed law effective, and uniformly effective, some general state instrumentality must be invoked, and that, without dissent, in open meeting, and before the committee was appointed, it was decided that the proper instrumentality was to be found in the Commissioner of Agriculture; accordingly, the Commission-

PREVENTION BETTER

THAN CURE.

TAX PAYER seems to hold that to encourage sheep raising it is necessary only to pay the damages when sheep are killed by dogs. The framers of the present dog law the State Sheep Growers Association, thought otherwise.

On the principle that we need a fire department to put out fires, as well as fire insurance companies to pay fire losses, that prevention may be better than cure, the sheep growers held that it is highly desirable to stop sheep killing as far as possible, as well as to pay sheep losses when they occur.

It was stated again and again, in the discussions of the proposed law, that to create a sheep fund was only one object, to reduce the number of sheep killed being the other, and equally important, object.

One excellent way to reduce sheep killing is to get rid of the large number of worthless dogs in the country at large.

It was held that these dogs would be eliminated to the degree in which the law was enforced.

To secure the enforcement it was held to be good policy to create more or less expensive instrumentalities for the enforcement of the law.

RESULTS THUS FAR.

The showing on March 31st would indicate that the enforcement of the present law is without precedent in the state.

Up to March 31st Fayette County had collected $3605.00 and killed 122 dogs.

How many worthless dogs in this and other counties were killed by their owners to escape taxation will never be known.

During the whole of 1918 Fayette County collected $972 and killed no dogs.

Up to March 31st Madison County had collected $1079 and had killed no dogs.

During the whole of 1918 Madison County collected $1355, and I understand, killed no dogs.

Up to March 31st Garrard County had collected $1914, and had killed 6 dogs.

During the whole of 1918 Garrard County collected $997, and killed no dogs.

For the whole state the number of dogs licensed by the county clerks up to a short time ago, was something like 275,000, according to the Commissioner of Agriculture. During the whole of 1918 the number of dogs taxed was 93,120.

As for money going to the livestock fund after all expenses have been paid, Fayette County had by the end of March laid by considerably more than twice as much as it laid by during the whole of 1918; Madison County nearly twice as much; and Garrard County $222.83 more than in 1918.

er is, by the provisions of the law, charged with its enforcement throughout the state.

The committee mentioned had many meetings and finally got their bill into shape, and then went to Frankfort and "sat up" with it until it was passed.

So the present dog law, whether it is in the interest of the sheep grower or not, is the product of mature and prolonged deliberation on the part of the State Sheep Growers Association as a body, and of an exceptionally strong committee from that body.

THAT FIVE PER CENT.

TAX PAYER understands that the five per cent of the tax collected that goes to the Commissioner is simply an increase in his salary. On the contrary, he does not, under the law, get a single cent of it.

He can use this money only in the enforcement of the law, and he is required by general statutes to make a report giving an itemized statement of expenditures necessary for the general enforcement of the law.

So that in urging the enforcement of this law the Commissioner is, in the first place, only performing a duty which he is under oath to perform, and he is, in the second place, getting not one cent additional salary out of it.

Common justice requires that every law-abiding man bear in mind the above mentioned facts.

TAX PAYER states that the farmer who had sheep killed was told that ten dollars was the limit allowed for grade sheep. Section 28 of the law allows $15 as the limit on grade sheep.

TAX PAYER also states that this farmer was told that he would have to wait twelve months for his money.

Section 27 of the law provides that when a claim for damages has been proven, the County Clerk shall immediately draw his warrant upon the treasurer of the county in favor of the claimant for the amount of the loss or damage sustained.

WHO IS TAX PAYER?

In a court of justice, when a witness goes on the stand, the first question put to him is for the purpose of establishing his identity - to find out who he is. In certain respects it is a witness on the stand. The question of who he is is important.

Indeed, I hold that it is quite as important as it is to know who a witness is. Without prejudice or courtesy

I would like to raise the question:

WHO IS TAX PAYER?

I know who he is reputed to be.

And I wish that the gentleman, whom

I do not know personally, but whose family name has for generations been a synonym for that which is best in the traditions of Kentucky, could find it in his heart to lay aside his non de plume.

With no reflection whatever on the honesty and integrity of his intentions.

I would like for the gentleman to tell the public how many kernels

he is interested in, what kennel tax he himself paid, how many dogs he listed with the assessor, and how many tags he got from the county clerk.

I would like for him, also, to state whether he is or ever was a member of a state, or a national fox-hunters association, and if he ever was a member of a sheep growers association.

I would like also to know if his article was prepared in collaboration with other fox-hunters, or members of a fox-hunters association, and if so, who his collaborators are.

TAX PAYER'S FAIRNESS

UNQUESTIONED.

I repeat, and I stoutly maintain, that in asking these questions there is no shadow of doubt in my mind as

LATE ARRIVAL FROM PARIS.

Above is shown a black silk afternoons gown with overskirt effect. A cluster of black leaves at the bodice comprises a pleasing effect, while a string of black beads drapes from the shoulders.

SOME NEW COLLAR FABRICS

Scrim of Coarse Weave and Chinese Silk Among the Decorations for Neckwear.

There was a time, long years ago, notes a fashion authority, when we used to wear high, stiffened collars of velvet and satin and silk. We considered those fabrics—velvet and satin and silk—quite the fabrics for collars in those days.

Then, when collarless frocks came in, we wore collars of white wash fabrics, organdie and muslin of various sorts. For, of course, though our frocks were collarless, they had collars just the same. That is, there were turned back and rolled over collars, even more important than the high ones that highest and matted our necks used to have. So we ran along for years with collars and other sorts of neckwear of organdie and net and lace.

Then, again, satin came into being as a neckwear fabric in first favor. And colored muslins of various sorts were also used.

And now there are even some other unusual materials in vogue for collars.

One is scrim, of a heavy, coarse weave, embroidered, which is used on some of the frocks of serge and satin.

Chinese silk—that is to say, silk or satin much embroidered in the Chinese fashion—is another fabric now used for collars on serge frocks. Needless to say, this doesn't mean that if you happen to have a bit of such silk on hand you can simply pin it deftly around the neck of your new blue serge frock and think you have a collar of the most up-to-date sort. No; but your dressmaker can use a bit of this silk for such a purpose by cutting it properly. And very probably she will reiterate the same colors in some embroidery or other part of the frock.

METHODS OF APPLYING BRAID

Three Ways, Entirely by Hand, by Machine and by the Combination Plan.

There are three ways of applying braid or tape as edge trimming—entirely by hand, entirely by machine and by a combination of hand and machine work. In each case care must be taken to "ease" the braid with the left hand as the work proceeds in order to avoid shrinking in wash material and puckering in silk or wooden goods. Braids invariably shrink in shrinking more than other material.

When the application is to be made by hand alone, writes a correspondent, place the braid on the right side of the material close to the edge and buckstitch the two together. The stitching should lie very near the edge, but not near enough to cause fraying.

After the buckstitching is completed fold in half and crease the braid and hem it down on the wrong side of the material. The braid should just cover the backstitching on the wrong side and the hemming run close to it.

In the combination method the process is the same except that the first stitching is done on the machine. In the machine work special care must be taken to keep the braid sufficiently taut. To do the work by machine alone fold the braid in half, place the material between the folded halves and baste carefully; then with one stitching on the machine in the three thicknesses.

Flowers, Flowers Everywhere.

Flowers are everywhere in the new spring millinery. Vines of large as well as smaller flowers clamber about brims and over crowns, and there is even a mode that dictates the single, flat flower plastered somewhere on the hat.

"Out West"

By RALPH HAMILTON

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.

"An insufferable old bore!"
"Yes, and looks and acts like a bore. Thought from his talk when he went out West a year ago, he was going to come back with a fortune. Looks to me as if he has about blown in all he has on that wild flower fool of his."

"Yes, and he wants to find some place to store his rubbishy stuff. He won't turn this place into a warehouse. I can't tell you!"

Thus Abel Dallas, Dan Porter and Nat Wells. They were discussing their old bachelor relative, John Bristow, an old, generous old fellow who had sold out quite extensively property holdings in Evenden and had gone to the Pacific coast to speculate. They had built high hopes upon his return, for Bristow was a natural born trader and had quite some capital. Naturally some one of them would inherit his fortune. Blasted anticipations changed to sober disappointment after Bristow had made the rounds of their various homes, at the first a welcome guest. Following him came a lot of cases which he had temporarily stored in a local warehouse. Their contents were soon revealed.

"I suppose," announced Bristow, "that I have brought back with me the finest and most complete collection of the flora of the Rockies ever gathered. I bought it from a man who had devoted twenty years toward assembling them. Thinks I, there isn't much I have done for my native town, and here's the opportunity to make a ten strike. What I'm going to do is to get at the collection, classify it, put it in permanent exhibition cases and present it to the public library for the entertainment and enlightenment of the community."

At which Abel secretly snickered. Dan unthanked the donation under his breath and Nat covertly snored. The idea? The public library was a struggling proposition, poorly supported and housed in small, gloomy quarters in the half attic of a rickety old store building.

The inevitable resulted. The Dallas, the Porter and the Wells families, finding that there was no opportunity of getting anything out of "the old fellow," began to turn the cold shoulder upon him. One by one the three families ceased their cordialities. He was no longer the honored, welcome guest and, one day when Bristow stated that he must bid permanent living quarters and a place to keep his floral treasures, not a voter gathered his decision. It was while seeking his new refuge that one day Bristow met Nellie Tracy. Her sincere greeting warmed his lonely heart. She was his half niece, had recently married, and invited Bristow to her home. There he met her husband, about as fine a young man as he had ever known. Both Arnold Tracy and his wife were nature lovers. The second visit resulted in Bristow taking up his quarters in their home. They apportioned to him two rooms, so he could have his collection ready at hand to arrange and catalogue, making a minimum charge for the accommodation because they were really interested in his specimens and liked him, and nearly every evening took an honest delight in helping him in his work of classifying the floral collection.

John Bristow was certainly an ardent devotee of his engrossing field. He talked flowers to everybody, announcing that when Judge Parsons returned from a visit to some relatives in the East, they would begin to plan us to getting the collection in charge of the public library. This Mr. Parsons was an ex-judge, a great friend of Bristow, and had been the main mover in establishing the Evenden Library.

Meanwhile the Dallas and the Porter and the Wells families barely recognized the old man when they passed him on the street. Bristow went about in shabby attire and they attributed this to a lack of money. They sneered at the kindly co-operation of the Tracys. They derided the philanthropic impulses of Bristow. There being no evidences that he had not exhausted his former means, they regarded him as unworthy of any consideration.

And one evening Judge Parsons walked into the Tracy home and there was a great commotion. He commented the worthy motives of the old man, and dilated upon the pleasure and the education the floral collection would give to students and nature lovers.

"It seems a shame to place such treasures in the poor, common quarters we now occupy," he remarked.

"Oh! I wanted to see you about that," exclaimed the enthusiast in a lively tone. "You see, I've been waiting to have you help me plan out a new building for the library."

"A new building!" repeated the Judge vaguely.

"That's what I am going to do."

"But the cost—the money?"

"Oh, I've got plenty for that," quite craftily chuckled the old man. And then he directed a queer, affectionate smile at Nellie and Arnold. "Judge," he said, "soon as we can get together for a good talk, I want you to make out the papers for a ten thousand dollar donation to the new library, and as much more for these two loyal friends, who have stood by me like Trojans, never caring if I had only a dollar or one hundred thousand of them, which about represents what I made out West."

Verdure on China's Great Wall.

Trees and shrubbery planted in the soil that has been accumulating for hundreds of years on the great wall of China are in thriving condition, some of them having grown to height of 12 to 18 feet. This method of beautifying the great wall was an outgrowth of the movement for the restoration of the country started some time ago with government sanction under the direction of foreign experts. The driveway on the great wall is considered very much improved with the addition of trees.

TREATMENT FOR GRAZING LANDS

Alternate Grazing Not Practiced Much by Farmers on Account of Expense.

DISK AND HARROW FAVERED

Spike-Tooth Harrow Less Likely to Loosen Large Pieces of Soil When Used Alone—Good for Distributing Manure.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Alternate grazing as a relief for continuous grazing has long been recommended by experts, but little practiced by farmers. It involves the division of pastures so that each portion of the field may be given alternate periods of rest during the grazing season. Grass makes a maximum yield if allowed definite periods of uninterrupted growth. However, the extra expenses for fences and labor deter many farmers from following this system which, although it is adapted for practice in some sections of the country, is not so favorable in others.

Disking and Harrowing.

Cultural treatment, such as diskling and harrowing, are recommended where a soil-bound condition of the grass develops, as the slight mashing of the surface obliterates weeds and also improves the mechanical and physical condition of the soil. Generally speaking, there is considerable expense attached to diskling and harrowing, and unless the returns are commensurate with the cost, a farmer is scarcely justified in thus treating his grazing lands, particularly if other work on the farm is competing for his attention at the same time.

The Spike-Tooth Harrow.

The average disk will cut and turn sod to some extent no matter how nearly straight it is set, and on this account its use is often more detrimental than beneficial. Ordinarily, in the case where the ground is inclined to wet at the time of treatment, a considerable portion of the turf may be turned up, while if dry weather follows permanent injury to the pasture is quite likely to result. A spike-tooth harrow following the disk usually drags the loosened pieces of sod some distance away, thereby leaving numerous areas of considerable size entirely bare. This happens more especially on slopes where a complete covering is difficult to maintain, even under the most favorable conditions. The spike-tooth harrow, when used alone, is less likely to loosen large pieces of sod than when used in conjunction with the disk. Its use during the spring over numerous small areas of ungrazed grass where the droppings from animals have fallen is beneficial in that it uniformly distributes this fertilizer.

FORAGE FOR HOGS OR SHEEP

Under Favorable Conditions It is Ready for Pasturing in 50 Days From Seeding.

One of the best crops to furnish green forage for hogs or sheep is rape. It may be broadcasted on well-prepared seed beds at the rate of six to eight pounds per acre and covered with a harrow, or drilled solid, using five or six pounds, or in rows 24 to 28 inches apart, with two or three pounds of seed per acre. The Dwarf Essex variety has proved the most desirable, as it will furnish a very satisfactory ration for sheep and lambs alone, and when supplemented with grain is unequaled for hogs. Under favorable conditions it is ready for pasturing in 40 to 50 days from seeding, and if not pastured too closely will furnish forage until freezing weather, the amount varying with the fertility of the soil.

FEED FOR LITTLE CHICKENS

Wet Stuff is Apt to Sour and Make Them Sick—Never Allow Them Without Pure Water.

Don't feed the little chickens wet feed for it is apt to sour and make them sick and unhealthy. Oatmeal, cracked corn, wheat, kafir corn, millet, seed and stalk grains are good food. Give them some sharp seed and this ground and never allow them to be without pure water to drink.

The House Boat

By SADIE ESTELLE BALCOM

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

He was thinking of Theba Wayne as he walked along the shore of the great spreading river, and as he recalled the change a month had made in her, Alphon Merton was truly sorrowful. All the brightness of her nature seemed to have languished when her old father died. He had been a confirmed invalid, great care to her, but the loving devotion she exerted through five years to his behalf had obscured all other interests. Then when the reaction came it seemed as though all the props of life were suddenly removed, and Theda collapsed like an overburdened being worn out and weary to the limit.

With the death of Mr. Wayne there expired the pension which, with what Theda could sell of their small garden produce, had kept their heads just above water. They did not own the little place where they lived. Theda could not hope to continue the lease and make a living, so she sold off the few poor sticks of furniture left, and went to an old maid relative who lived a mile down the river road. Linda Noyes.

Miss Noyes was over 50, fragile and poor, had a small income from a trust investment, could scarcely afford to spare a room or a meal, but she voluntarily proffered shelter to her half-niece.

"We'll manage some way, dear," she said. "It's crowded in those three little rooms I occupy, but we'll try to get along. You mustn't worry about that for the present, child. You are so near a breakdown that it's a question if even nursing and rest will help you, but we'll try. For one good long month you mustn't lift your finger, not even think."

Theba smiled listlessly and declared she would be all right in a day or two, but before the end of the first week in her new home she was ill and likely to stay there for some time to come. The village doctor shook his head solemnly, and left some medicine and the grawsome decision:

"Change of scene and climate, Miss Noyes, is all that will do Theda any good."

The gentle hearted spinster told Alphon Merton of this with tears in her eyes. Alphon was an independent fisherman and pearl gatherer along the Iowa shore of the great Father of Waters, owned a shack, some boats and a river equipment, and for a year had once a week come around to see Theda and her father. Mr. Wayne had been a great reader. Alphon had an ambition for a better education, and the old man and his books became a great help to him. Their admiration, friendship and kindly love for Theda had become a new allurement. He was a clean-minded, modest young fellow, gave no outward evidence of his affection for Theda, but when Mr. Wayne died was a great comfort to Theda, for he took many of the care of the occasion from her tired shoulders.

Miss Noyes had told Alphon of the doctor's report, and later as he went down the river shore Alphon's clear face betrayed a deep anxiety. It seemed as though he must stand helplessly by and see Theda fade away, day by day. Like himself poverty bound her to an environment from which she could not escape. As to Alphon even the meager living he was assured could not be risked through an experimental change. "No thoroughfare" the future seemed to read. Alphon was immersed in despondent thoughts when a cry aroused him.

Three hundred yards distant an ordinary house boat was moored. On its deck a man of middle age, getting about with a crutch, was struggling to free himself from the grasp of a rough looking fellow whom Alphon at once recognized as one of the numerous river thieves of the district.

The latter swung a heavy iron bar and dealt the cripple a terrible blow, and as his victim sank to the deck senseless, stooped over him to rifle his pockets. A shout from Alphon caused him to hasten away with his booty. Then when Alphon reached the stricken man all he thought of was his retribution.

It took two days nursing to bring Wade Burnham, as the cripple was named, back to normal condition. All the time Alphon was his patient, helpful nurse. The grateful man on his way to a little truck farm he had traded for on the river below New Orleans, acquired a great liking for Alphon. He asked him to join him and he would share his holdings with him.

It came about that Alphon spoke of the offer to Miss Noyes. Then one day he could not resist telling Theda of his great love for her. From that moment a new joy came into her life. They were married and then began a honeymoon on the floating home, ending up at the pretty cottage that stood in the center of the Burnham farm.

"Oh, what a paradise!" mourmed Theda, as she stood upon the veranda of the beautiful home surrounded by flowers, and sunshine, and sweet singing birds and their Eden life began, never to pall or weary in that rare spot where beauty, and peace, and plenty were assured.

The average life of a locomotive is about fifteen years.

How These Band Boys CAN Play--
But They Worked, Too, Over There

REHEARSALS and concerts were by no means all the routine of the members of the two American overseas bands which have started out for a concert trip through the Fourth Federal Service District in order to help put over the Victory Loan. The two bands are the 135th Field Artillery Band, in charge of Harry E. Clarke of Cleveland, and the 136th Infantry Band, commanded by Lieutenant Alfred Hartzell of Cincinnati.

All the members of both bands saw fighting in three sectors in France and showed their proficiency with rifle and bayonet, grenades and entrenching tools as well as with band instruments.

One of the members of the Field Artillery Band, Benjamin H. Carmichael, was a mechanic in Cleveland before he enlisted and went overseas. In France he drove the official automobile for Colonel Dudley J. Hard for several months. He was through the fighting in the Marne sector, the Argonne, the Meuse, St. Mihiel and the Tropic front and ate his Thanksgiving dinner at Metz, Germany.

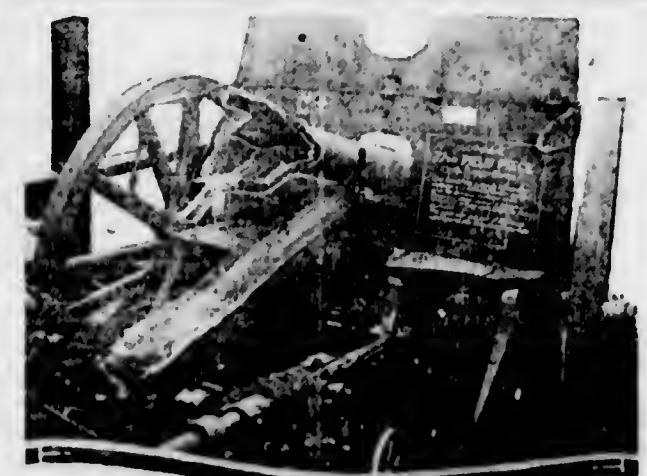

Other members of these two bands laid telephone lines under shell fire or drove ammunition trucks. The instruments of the 135th Band were lost for three months and during this time they performed army routine with their fellows.

Both these bands are scheduled for a two weeks' trip through the District beginning April 21, and may remain out a third week.

Seven Huns Died Here

RETRIBUTION was swift and sure for the gunners who manned the 77-millimeter German field piece which is a feature on one of the war trophy trains which left Cleveland April 13 for a swing through the Fourth Federal Reserve District in behalf of the Victory Loan campaign.

When the position of this gun, shown in the accompanying picture, was taken by Canadian troops, seven German artillerymen were found dead beside it. Their blood still spatters the carriage. The barrel is mangled as the result of the explosion of a defective shell. This was at Vimy Ridge, where so many Canadians died gloriously.

An equally interesting exhibit on the train is a German Big Bertha or 210-millimeter gun with a range of 18 miles.

There is also a 160-millimeter field gun of bronze, originally made by the Russians but captured from them by the Germans and used on the western front. It was then captured by the Canadians and turned against the Huns.

McCombs Road Oil

"From the time of the Roman Caesars it has been recognized that prosperity follows good roads."

THE high cost of material and the shortage of labor put a premium upon the preservation of present equipment; and for the preservation of good roads a gallon of oil is worth a bushel of labor.

Imperative demands of the war period have prevented adequate road maintenance, improvement and extension. The immense transportation problem of reconstruction requires that the arteries of traffic be kept in good condition.

Roads well oiled last indefinitely. A well-oiled road is impervious to the destructive forces of nature and offers adequate resistance to the wear and tear of heavy traffic.

A correspondent wonders how such a phrase as "piping time of peace" could originate. One might think it referred to the Indian's peace pipe, but Shakespeare was rather unfamiliar with the customs of American aborigines. However, Shakespeare did what he pleased with English language.

Real Pioneer.

One of the first white men and in all probability the first British subject to make his abode in territory comprised within the boundaries of the province of New Brunswick, Canada, was John Gyles, who was carried from the southern British colonies to the wilderness of the valley of the St. John river by marauding bands of Indians.

After the Fire.

When fire has swept a bit of wood land the flowers that start the following season are often not the same as grew there before and frequently are strange to the locality. Queer legends have grown up to account for this fact but the explanation is in reality very simple. Down under the surface soil these seeds have been waiting no one knows how long. They never had a chance before fire gave it.

Monarch's Compliment.

A pretty compliment was that Philip IV of Spain, himself painter, tendered to a greater artist, Velasquez. When Velasquez had finished his famous picture "Las Meninas," which includes not only Philip and his queen, but the artist himself, brush in hand, he asked of the king, "Is anything wanting?" "One thing only," answered Philip; and taking the palette from Velasquez's hands, he painted on the breast of the artist's figure in the picture the Cross of the Order of Santiago, the most distinguished in Spain.

A BROKEN LIFE

By ALLEN CHAMPNEY.

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.

"Miss Cayenne, you said?"

"Yes."

"Why the peppery name?"

"You would know if you spent an evening in her company! Rightfully she is Mrs. Naomi Winters, but in a casual way the other appellation has become common. You may wonder at it, for she is not only beautiful but rich. Her eccentricities are constant and numerous, and young as she is they say she has a satire and sarcasm at command that would make a star of an old Greek pessimistic philosopher. Some deep disappointment must have ruled the fair surface of her life, for she is a consistent man-hater and her apt ridicule of sham, pretense and affection has not made her at all popular."

The speakers stood at a window of the lobby of the hotel at Waucliff, regarding a gaudily appearing lady who was just passing by.

They casually discussed her and turned away, but a man of about thirty who had stood directly behind them moved closer to the window. There was something more than interest in his face—a token of deep emotion and a thoughtful expression were visible in his eyes as he remained staring blankly out on the street. He had become a guest at the hotel and registered as Ballard Paxton that morning. At the end of a protracted reverie he turned away with a deep sigh.

The lady who was the object of all this attention was life in harmony, to outward seeming, with the designation that had been awarded her. Her face, though smileless, almost severe, was perfect in its contour. Her eyes, which at times were scornful or haughty, when in repose bore a half-hidden sadness that told of some secret sorrow.

A storm of censure and disapproval greeted her when she selected Alice Wade as her maid. A member of a family poor, obscure, the father of which was a drunkard, herself a deserted wife, Alice had been shunned, despised. With rare human pity Miss Winters took her up, lifting a depressed soul from gloom to sunshine and winning a devotion and love that was almost pathetic.

It was Alice who knew of countless deeds of charity done by her mistress in secret. It was she who knew that in her dark moody moments Miss Winters shut herself up in a room never visited by others. It was Alice who knew that her young mistress had loved and lost, embittering her life in the present.

The stranger at the hotel for three nights in succession passed some time in the vicinity of the house where Miss Winters lived. He was rather mysterious in his actions. He avoided pedestrians and never left his hotel during daytime. One evening he was near to the Winters' home, when Alice was hurrying towards the house. As she passed a hedge a rough-looking man sprang into view and caught her arm.

"It's me, my pretty, your roving, unfortunate husband. I hear you've got a job where there's lots of money and jewels. You've got to get me some."

"I wouldn't give you a penny if you were starving!" protested Alice and broke away. The man started after her. Paxton intervened, knocked him senseless with a single blow, and impaled the girl homewards.

"There, you are safe," he said, "and if that miserable trouble you again just call the police. Why! what is that?" a thunderous sound emanated from the house, startling, alarming.

"Something has happened. Oh, my young mistress!" pitied Alice, and she rushed into the house, followed by Paxton. Into the wing room Alice dashed. At its threshold for an instant Paxton paused. A part of the ceiling had fallen and Miss Winters lay insensible on the floor amidst its debris. This was the room where Miss Winters spent so many hours of meditation in solitude. Upon a table in the corner was a framed photograph, miraculously resembling the young man, some trifles of jewelry, a faded bouquet, evidently love mementos of a past.

Paxton's face was colorless. He quivered like a strong tree shaken by a tempest as he lifted Miss Winters tenderly, carried her to a couch in the next room and telephoned for a physician. A great inspiration of relief swept him as an hour later Alice came to him and informed him that the doctor reported Miss Winters only temporarily stunned. Alice looked agitated as she gazed at the photograph and then at the stranger.

"You are the man!" she spoke in a low, intense tone.

"You mean, an old friend of Miss Winters, whom she has remembered?" replied Paxton. "Yes, I was her affianced husband. A scheming sister plotted to prove to me that she loved another. I left home a broken-hearted wanderer. Only a few months since I learned of the cruel conduct of my sister."

"Shall I tell Miss Winters this?" questioned Alice.

"If you will," and Alice went away and returned with a beaming face. "She knew all. She wishes to see you. Oh! make her happy, for I love her, even as you do," and leading Paxton to the room where Naomi Winters awaited him, Alice closed the door after him, and those two, so cruelly parted, were reunited for all the future.

ADVANTAGES OF HAY CAPS ARE NUMEROUS

Give Protection From Rain and Reduce Loss of Leaves.

One of Strongest Recommendations is Fact That Growers East of Mississippi River Are Enthusiastic Over Their Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hay caps—covers used in curing hay in cocks—give protection from rain, reduce the loss of leaves, improve the color and increase the feeding value of the hay. One of the strongest recommendations for the use of hay caps is the fact that hay growers east of the Mississippi river who have used them are nearly always very enthusiastic regarding their advantages. The chief reason hay caps are not used more extensively, both North and South, is that most hay growers are of the opinion that they cost too much to warrant their use. In many sections the reduction in the value of hay through discoloration by sun and rain in a normal season amounts to as much as, or perhaps more than, the cost of enough hay caps to prevent this loss.

Hay caps are of two distinct types—those that are entirely impervious to both air and rain, and those that shed nearly all of the rain, and at the same time allow most of the moisture-laden air from the interior of the stack to pass through and be carried away. The caps are fastened on the hay cocks by weights attached to each corner of the cap and buried in the hay, or by use of strings tied to each corner of the cap and fastened together near the ground on opposite sides of the cock. Caps should be put in place as soon as the cock is made, but when there is no indication of rain this may be delayed until the following forenoon. When the caps are not in use they should be dried thoroughly and stored, but large growing ensilage varieties are benefited. Though somewhat dwarfed by very early cutting, the large en-

PLANT CORN FOR ENSILAGE EARLY

Expensive Mistake Generally Made in Northern States by Planting Crop Last.

BEST FOR LARGE VARIETIES

Crops Are Made Much More Profitable When Judged by Feeding Value and Not by Its Height or Weight—Cultivation Pays.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Planting ensilage corn last instead of first is an expensive mistake very generally made in northern portions of the United States. Strong germinating seed of ensilage varieties from farther south should be planted two or three weeks earlier than the homegrown seed, which is planted for the production of grain.

Earlier Planting, Better Yields.

When large ensilage varieties from Virginia or Missouri, for example, are planted in northern states late in May, they make a rapid, long-jointed, tender, succulent growth, and are green when fall frosts occur, that they are heavy to handle, low in feeding value, and make ensilage which is sloppy and too sour. But when planted in April, or very early May, they make a slower, harder growth, better with stand, spring frosts and summer droughts, and reach a more advanced condition of maturity and produce more grain than when planted later. Fall frosts, not spring frosts, are not to be feared.

Early maturing, home-grown varieties do not need and may not be benefited by unusually early planting, but large growing ensilage varieties are benefited. Though somewhat dwarfed by very early cutting, the large ensilage varieties will, by nature, make ample stalk growth, and because of early planting will yield more and ripen grain and make richer and sweeter ensilage. Early planting supplies the age necessary for maturation and reproduction.

This Crop Was a Failure Because the Soil Moisture Became Exhausted Just When the Plants Should Have Begun to Form Ears—Plant Silage Corn Early.

Early Cultivation Warms Soil.
Ensilage crops in the North are made much more profitably when these two points are observed:

Judge the crop by its feeding value and not by its height or weight, or the amount of labor necessary to silo it.

Although earlier planting necessitates earlier cultivation, it pays. Early cultivation dries and warms the soft surface. If it remains wet it remains cold, and the young corn cannot grow. Stirring causes the surface to dry rapidly, absorbs heat, feels warm to the hand, and the corn to grow, while near by, uncultivated soil will remain cold, with corn at a standstill.

LESSONS OF DAIRYING APPLIED TO WOODLAND

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Feed costs money. If a cow does not pay for her feed you dispose of her and buy a new one.

Why keep a tree if it is not paying rent on the land it occupies? Replace it by a faster growing tree.

If you want good calves you breed good cows.

You can not get good young trees from the seed of poor kinds. Leave seed trees of the kinds that grow fastest and are most valuable.

FEED GRAIN FOR FINISHING

Practice is Advisable to Harden Soft Fat and Meat and Put on Additional Weight.

Farmers substituting pasture entirely for grain and other concentrated feeds to their market hogs through the summer will find that, before marketing in the fall, it will be advisable to feed grain to harden the soft fat and meat and put on additional weight. Light but steady grain feeding on pasture, however, gives better results than a heavier feeding during a short or finishing period.

REX

I will stand this well bred saddle stallion at my place two miles from Lancaster, on the Richmond pike, out the Harris Lane at $7.00 FOR A HORSE COLT AND $11.00 FOR A MARE COLT.

Rex is formerly known as the Nat Cotton horse, and made the season near Kirkville.

He is by Rex Arbuckle and out of a Denmark mare.

He is just the type to breed to for saddle and farm horses. His colts are his best recommendations. They speak for themselves.

A hen will be retained on all colts until season is paid. Will use every means to prevent accidents but not responsible should any occur.

Mrs. Ephriam Brown gave a beautiful Easter dinner at her home on Stanford avenue. The home was charmingly decorated in blues. The table had for its center piece a crystal basket filled with white and purple blues. Several delicious courses were served and eight guests were present. The affair was marked by the happiest spirit of hospitality.

At the Presbyterian Church Rev. H. S. Hudson performed the christening services of the infant daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Marshall K. Denny, bestowing upon the wee one her baptismal name Alice Franklin, rendering her the name sake at once of her aunt, Mrs. Fred P. Frisbie and of her grandfather, Mr. B. F. Hudson.

Miss Edna Berkele was hostess at her home on Lexington avenue, at a luncheon arranged in honor of Miss Aleene Fratman and Miss Thelma Wright, State College students, who were guests of Miss Florence Johnson and Miss Mamie Storner Dunn. Spring flowers in vases enhanced the beauty of the home. It was a most enjoyable affair. James Woods, Bowman Grant, Bradley Bourne, Harry Rainey, Charles Dunn and Allen Johnson.

Mrs. Nannie Hood Tucker, loyalty to whom incited the Winchester High School students to walk out on a strike, demanding her reinstatement as Latin teacher, is well remembered in Lancaster as a most attracting and charming woman, having at one time been a frequent visitor to her cousins, Dr. Thomas Hood and his sister, Miss Emma Hood. Miss Tucker is closely related to Gen. Hood of Civil War fame, and her own bearing indicates fine breeding.

Northcott, who was one of the fixtures of Lancaster during the past twenty-five years, but now making his home in Newport, Ky., in renewing his subscription to the Record says: "Enclosed find check for $100.00 for subscriptions for the next twelve months. The destroyer Kalk, of which Lieut. Lucien Grant, is Engineer Officer is one of the ten or twelve destroyers to take part in the naval trans-Atlantic flight, scheduled for May 10th. These destroyers will be stationed along the route in support of the aviators and the Kalk will have position about 41 degrees of longitude and 43 degrees N. latitude, in other words right in the middle of the pond. His old home friends congratulate Lieut. Grant on participating in this epoch making event. Lieut. Grant has hopes too that his ship will be sent to New York for the grand naval review.

Mrs. Fisher Herring has presented the Graded School with two very interesting pictures handsomely framed. They are the interior of the first brick house built in Kentucky, erected by Col. William Whitley in 1783. One picture, is the parlor showing hand carved wood-work. The 13th over the mantel signifying the sister of the Union. In this room treaties were made with Indians. Here were entertained George Rogers Clark, Isaac Shelby, Daniel Boone, and other notabilities. The other picture is the stairway in Whitley House showing carved eagle heads described by Roosevelt in his book, "The Winning of the West". This house is at Walnut Flat about five miles from Crab Orchard.

In renewing his subscription to the Central Record, Mr. J. W. Ramsey, formerly of this county, but now living at Washington, Ind., says: "Please find enclosed P. O. money order for $1.50 to renew my subscription to the Central Record for ensuing year. I have been away from Lancaster since June 1868, but I still have a kindly feeling for the old town and county, where I first saw the light of day. I was born in sight of Gilberts Creek church was old Thomas Salter's Farm, at that time. I met Louis Landrum, in 1894 in Saint Louis, at the Worlds Fair, when he was Editor of the Record, it was then I subscribed for it, and have been a subscriber ever since. I see many names that are familiar to me in the paper, but there are very few I know outside of Judge Lige Harris, J. W. Pumphrey, Thomas Wherry, John Duncan, and Capt. Tom Elkin. Capt. Elkin was in my Regiment, (the 13th Ky.) for a year. W. J. Landrum was Col. I hope to visit the old town this summer.

Respectfully,

J. W. Ramsey".

Your Teeth

DO THEY NEED ATTENTION?

"AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH A POUND OF CURE" IS AN OLD SAYING.

Germis from decayed teeth and unhealthy gums cause many diseases of the body. Rheumatism, heart and stomach trouble are but a few of the diseases. Clean teeth and healthy gums prevent these troubles.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO NEGLECT YOUR TEETH?

You would not eat tainted or decayed food. Yet with decayed teeth and diseased gums every bite of food is tainted, and in time your health pays the penalty.

One of the first questions your doctor puts to you is: How are your teeth?

Uncle Sam put thousands of dentists into service, because he realized the importance of caring for the teeth. Every soldier had to use a tooth-brush.

Make up your mind to-day to have your teeth examined and put into good condition. High class dentistry isn't necessarily expensive. When you decide to have your dental work done come to me first. I will examine your teeth and tell you what you need and what it will cost. I make a practice of saving teeth. You will get the best work and materials at very reasonable prices.

DEMAND FOR BEADS

Decoration Effectively Used on Articles of Apparel.

Tiny Circles and Squares Add to Attractiveness of Gowns, Hats, Slippers and Bags.

Of course everyone has noticed by this time that beads are just as much the vogue this spring as ever. Beads there are on hats, blouses, gowns and evening slippers, besides "purse bags" are still much beaded, and we wear beads around our necks, notes a correspondent.

Two patterns of beads much used on georgette blouses and frocks that are very easy to copy are the round and square designs. The round designs are merely circles of beads of some effective contrasting color, such as white beads on a coral fabric, or black beads on yellow, that are sewed on tulle in circles about as large as a saucer. Sometimes a bit of embroidery—wool or silk—is applied as a motif inside a circle.

The square pattern is developed extensively by the use of the shiny cylindrical beads about half an inch long.
These are applied in a very simple,
large plaid to whole dresses or tulle or blouses. Sometimes just a two-row border crosses in a plaid at the corner of a drapery or a collar.

Course wooden beads in natural wood color, or very bright colors, are among the novelty beads trimming
some of the very daintiest frocks.

In millinery, the wooden bead, often represents the center of a flower on a black matine hat of the midsummer lingerie type.

A very simple yet striking way to head a bag is to use round beads about the size of a pen, and sew them on moire silk in spaces about two inches apart all over the bag. Yellow beads on dull blue moire are an effective color combination.

Among the good color schemes to employ with fabrics and bead trimmings are cut steel or silver beads on Copenhagen blue, white beads on rose, red beads on white, crystal beads on pale green, bright blue beads on gray or yellow, white beads on very pale yellow, for a very dainty effect and black beads on the henna color.

Worn around the neck, beads not only will accent or modify a neck line, but when properly chosen, set off the complexion.

Beads are an inexpensive but clever way to add an expensive looking hand touch to many ready-made wearables, and it does not take a great deal of time to do it, if only striking colors and designs are chosen; so, all in all, let ladies pay attention to beads, this spring.

SATIN AND GEORGETTE CREPE

The predominating feature of this
"Arabesque" model is the odd combi-

is neutralized with mahogany-colored garments.

MODISH IDEAS

tely of vivid flowers, following the

They Were Seven!

By ERNEST BETTERIDGE

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"Looking for a job, eh? Well, you go seven blocks down that street to the end of the town. There you'll find Sevenonks. Next little place, John Darlow owns it. Ask for him. I happen to know he wants a kindly man and you look like that. And say, there's a pretty daughter there. Ah!
She's been to Darlow for seven years, like the man did in the story, and maybe you'll get her. And she's worth walling for, believe me!"

Thus a native of Brompton, answered
an incidental inquiry of Wyte Marsh. The latter, a fine looking young fellow of about 20, smiled at the quaint presentation of his informant, thanked him and seemed immersed with the "seven" idea, for with in seven minutes he was at the Darlow place.

Seven hours work about the place and at the supper table Marsh met Celia Darlow. Never so tidy a little housekeeper, never in more charming face! With a feeling of rare content Marsh settled down into a groove that seemed exactly fitted to him.

By the end of seven weeks Marsh and Celia were engaged. At the end of seven months John Darlow discovered this mutual devotion, fiercely ordered Marsh out of the house and tightly broke Celia's heart by that act. Celia clung with Marsh, and from a town seven miles distant wrote a begging note asking for the personal blessing and forgiveness.

There came back a scathing searching reply. Forever I suited, she was stout from Lent and home. Neither she nor the man she had wedded without permission should ever darken the door of Sevenonks again!

More weeks more bitter and definite replies, and Celia knew that she had rest in her lot with Marsh for good.
Seven years passed by, in forgiving and lonely for John Darlow, full of life, variety and bliss for the wedded lady. Tender, considerate, loving, Marsh had never given Celia cause to regret marrying him, except for sorrowful thoughts regarding her father.
Celia was supremely content.

Marsh, it seemed, before coming to Sevenonks had been a member of a circus troupe. He was a gymnast with a peculiar talent. This was the ability with lightning swiftness to hang, twist and swing from one trapeze bar to a series of others placed at various distances. His act was a star one and literally paid for. When he had applied at Sevenonks for work it was after a fit of illness and out of the circus season.

Marsh followed his unique profession only four months in the year. The first season Celia accompanied him, and added to their store of savings by taking charge of the wardrobe of the members of the troupe. The second year there was a baby, the third year Marsh had accumulated sufficient to purchase a pretty bungalow with several acres set in small fruit surrounding it.

Then began an ideal existence for the happy pair, still lovers. Marsh was at home eight months of the year.
Two new babies came along and health and harmony made the time fly swiftly.
Upon each recurring birthday of her father Celia wrote him a loving note, but no attention was paid to these.

It was the anniversary of their wedding day when bad news came to them.
Sevenonks was 200 miles away, but Marsh got out his automobile and started on the long trip without losing a moment. A telegram from a physician had apprised Celia that her father was dangerously ill. When they reached the old home a nurse told them that Mr. Darlow was unconscious, and after they had seen the physician they knew that the patient had seen his best days.

"His trouble may wear off with time," the doctor said, "but he may be invalid for many months." There was a serious consultation and Marsh took the responsibility of removing his father-in-law to their own home.

Marsh had to go away on business and it was with eagerness and expectation that he returned at the end of a week. Celia had written him that her father was improving, that he had even been able to come out into the garden in an invalid chair, but that his mind seemed still clouded.

Ah! how it awoke to full action the day when Marsh returned. As the volatile gymnast came in sight of the house seven children dashed to meet him with joyous cries. One by one as he picked them up, and one by one as he laid them down, he hung them all in a row upon the lower limb of a tree, suspended by foot, knee and hands. They bled the air with stridulent mirth. Then Marsh struck an idle attitude and let them run up his planted knee, and behold! a human pyramid! At all this John Darlow shrieked, "Ago!"

"Seven!" he breathed, bewilderedly.
"What a family—what a man—not all yours, Celia?"

"Four we adopted, dear father—orphans.
They belonged to an old circus partner of Wyte."

"He's a good man!" murmured Darlow brokenly. "Tell him so. I've been a hard-hearted old reprobate. Tell him that, too!" And an hour later Celia and Wyte, reconciled to the obdurate John Darlow, felt that their earthly paradise was complete.

Keeping a Record

By Walter Joseph Disney

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Note down every important event of each day," directed profound and systematic Julius Thurston, professor of philosophy at the Durham Institute. "At the end of the year go over it and sift out and preserve an epitome of the bearing of those incidents which have had an influence in building up character and mental strength."

"In other words, keep a diary!" whispered mudmud Blanche Deming to her close chum, Ida Vandamne, but the latter was covertly viewing the sly eyes, interested face of Chester Massey.

She was the daughter of the local banker, he the son of a struggling farmer. He was masterful enough, however, to work his way through school, and was no burden on his aged parents. An uncle of some means had agreed to finance him as soon as he graduated, in starting him in as a lawyer, and there was no doubt among the professors that Chester Massey was destined to make his mark in the world.

It was a few days after that when Chester, entering the little stationery store near the school, found Ida there. Their errands proved similar. Both had come to buy a neat, compact pocket book following the suggestion of Professor Thurston.

"We seem to be on the same errand," she said pleasantly, and as she received her purchase. "Do you know what my first entry is to be?" "This day Chester Massey patiently devoted an hour to construing my Greek for me and won me high marking."

"And I shall write that the most kindly and gracious young lady in the school honored me as helper and cheered me with her approbation," responded Chester glibly.

As the weeks went by Chester and Ida saw a good deal of one another. Several times they met at little school and college functions and seemed to pair off naturally. At least once a week Chester was included in invasions to tennis and archery at the handsome Vandamne place, and the banker father of Ida took a decided liking to Chester when, incidentally in conversation, the latter modestly discussed the subject of trade acceptances with Mr. Vandamne, both being interested in the possibilities of that new discounting system.

A closer bond was cemented between the two young people through the fact that they graduated together, the highest in their class. The wealthy uncle of Chester was present at the exercises, and before he left Durham arranged for Chester to start into professional life in a good way. Chester lingered a week away from home amid a series of frolics and parties given the class. The last day of his sojourn in the village he invited Ida to row down the river. She accepted in her pretty plangent way, and his heart thrilled as he fancied she was sorrowful over his prospective departure, and told him frankly she would miss him. A certain sense of sadness oppressed both as thunly, slipping the oars, Chester allowed the boat to drift at will. They were each silent, a conscious restraint affecting them as they realized that parting was soon to come. Then suddenly the boat veered past an island that divided the stream. "We must get ashore, and quickly!" he spoke. "Without ours we should soon be in peril." Ida uttered a very hoarse cry to deter him, but the next moment throwing off his coat, Chester sprang into the water, floated the boat toward the island, forced it upon the shelving bank, and emerged from the water, staggering and breathless.

"You can rest in the boat until I return with another one," he said as soon as he could recover his natural poise.

"But how—"

"I can swim to the mainland."

"Oh, no! no!" She had seized to her feet in the boat in a pleading attitude. You would risk your life!"

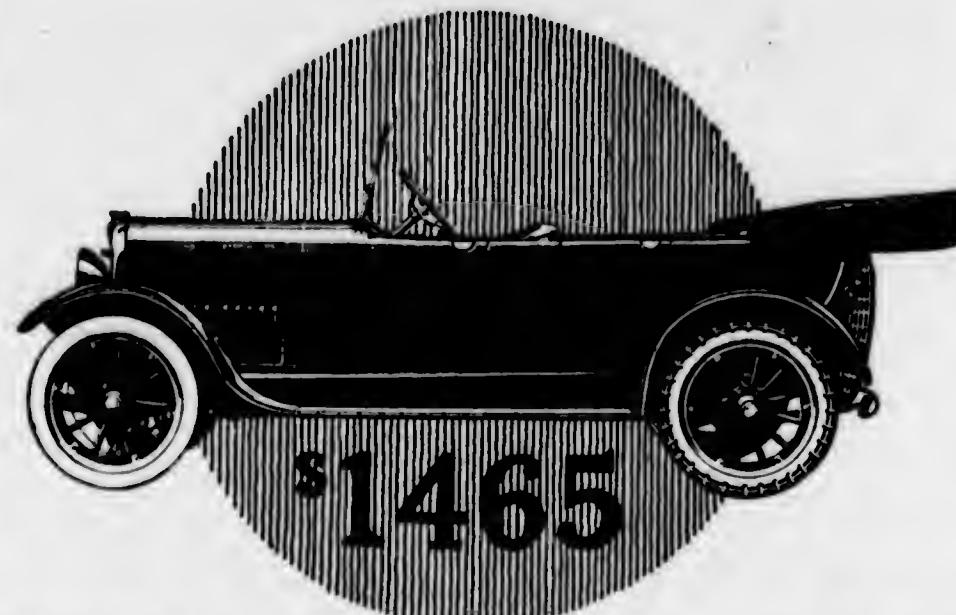

"But we cannot remain here indefinitely. No one might discover us through the whole day."

"Oh, don't go—please!" but with a tight laugh Chester ran down into the water, struck out, and her heart in her mouth Ida watched him with fear and trembling until he had reached the other shore. A great sigh of relief swept her lips. She noticed a little book lying in the bottom of the boat. It had fallen out of the pocket of Chester's discarded coat. As it opened in her hand she read her own name, once, twice, three. Then flushed and half shamed that she had allowed herself to read what was never intended for her eyes, she sat and clasped the little book in bewilderment and delicious daze.

For the innumerable pages here and there told of the growing love in the soul of the writer. Ida was so engrossed in thought that she did not notice the arrival of Chester with the relief boat until he leaped out and came toward her. He observed that she was awed by some intense emotion. She arose and tendered him the innumerable book.

"I have read inadvertently," she said. "Would it not be only fair to read what I have written, also?"

Ida drew from her pocket her own little volume of confessions. A great cry of joy issued from the lips of Chester Massey as he traced hope, happiness, love in the crowded lines. He opened his arms, and she nestled into them.

CONTROL SWEET POTATO WEEVIL

Industry May Be Seriously Jeopardized Unless Right Measures Are Adopted.

HEAVIEST LOSSES IN SOUTH

Pest Is Spread Mainly by Commercial Movement of Crops—Has No Natural Enemies So Far Known—Control Measures.

Unless rigid control methods are practiced to prevent the spread of the sweet potato weevil in the Gulf states, America's sweet potato industry will be seriously jeopardized. Last year $1,500,000 worth of sweet potatoes of the Gulf country were destroyed by the weevil. Texas, Louisiana and Florida growers suffered the heaviest losses, while in other sections of the South the crop was damaged from 25 to 50 per cent.

The sweet potato weevil, a small, squat-beetle, red and blue in color and mottled in appearance, bears the same relation to sweet potato production that the boll weevil does to cotton. The female weevil lays her eggs in the vines, and in the stalks or crowns near the ground, and also on the roots in the field and in store, continuing to work and breed in the roots in storage. The larvae, on hatching, tunnel through the vine to the roots, the vines die and frequently the roots become badly riddled and filled with excreta, giving them such a bitter taste that even swine will not eat them. Present knowledge indicates that the pest is spread mainly by the commercial movement of the sweet potato crop, as the weevil, although winged, travels very slowly in spreading infestation.

Control Is Difficult.

So far as is known the sweet potato weevil has no natural enemies. Its control would be comparatively simple through extensive quantities in the producing sections were it not that the pest also breeds on morning glory and bindweed. Control measures include the cleaning up of all old sweet potato fields by destroying all the vines, stems, tubers and other remnants. Then the ground should be deeply plowed and kept free from volunteer sweet potato and morning glory vines.

All sweet potatoes should be gathered and divided in the field into three lots: (1) weevil-free tubers, (2) roots slightly infested for fumigation, (3) roots badly infested. The third class, or cutts, with all remnants of an unsalable nature should be gathered and fed to hogs, cattle, or poultry after cooking them to insure that no weevil may escape to extend the infestation.

Sweet Potatoes.

Infestation. If the potatoes are unfit for feeding to live stock they should be burned with the aid of straw, dried weeds, paper or oil.

Crop rotation is an effective control measure. Indeed, injury to a large extent is preventable where care is used in the selection of the potato field for future planting. The new fields should be as far as possible from old sweet potato fields which have been infested and if possible should be separated from it by a natural barrier, such as a strip of woodland or such a crop as corn, tobacco, or Irish potatoes. The new crop should also be planted at a distance from the seedbed. One grower reports a decrease from 75 to 5 per cent annually in his sweet potato loss since he has practiced this method.

Roots which are not fully infested may be fumigated to advantage, where they are intended for early consumption. Carbon disulfide has been successfully used for this purpose. Under unfavorable conditions, however, fumigated roots may fall to a minute or sprout or may become subject to raphi and complete decay. This occurs especially where the tubers show a high moisture content.

Arsenical Spray Is Favored.

Before sweet potato plants are set out in the spring, it is advisable to dip them in a solution of one pound of lead arsenite dissolved in ten gallons of water. Spray the plants with arsenite for the first appearing weevils on leaves and stems. Construct all storage pits at points remote from the sweet potato field. They should be kept as dry as possible and should be constructed so as to allow for fumigation and to permit of inspection from time to time for weevil attack. All farmers of a section should co-operate in the eradication of the sweet potato weevil, as such work is for the common good of the community. In fact, to accomplish effective and persistent results combined community effort is necessary.

KHAKI COLUMN

Through the kindness of his father, Mr. R. H. Tomlinson, we are permitted to publish this letter from his son, Robert, Jr., which is interesting and will be read eagerly by his friends here.

"April 1st, 1919, Monaco.

This is the prettiest place on God's beautiful footstool I do honestly believe, never saw any place so pretty in all my life. All the buildings are of stone, and usually of a pale pink, with green tile roofs. All of the trees in full bloom and the oranges, lemons and figs and olives are bearing the trees down to the ground.

The Casino, which you know is the greatest gambling place in the world, is too gorgeous for words, with its rich hangings and gold embossed furnishings. Then the Prince of Monaco's Palace is certainly a place fit for a king. I went thru King Georges palace while in England but it cannot hold a candle to the castle of the Princess here.

Then too, the Mediterranean is beautiful, changing colors at almost every incoming breaker. Have been on some of the peaks of the Alps and have seen some of the snow capped ones. If I was a millionaire, I think that I know now where I would live from now on, but you know that they comprise almost the entire population of Monte-Carlo, as there are no industries or anything of the sort in the little province, of course they grow fruits but that doesn't afford any great amount of labor.

I am going for a little trip into Italy tomorrow I think, I want to see all the country possible while I am over here.

Don't know any news. Hope all the family are well. I am feeling fine. Give my regards to all.

Lots of Love,

Bob."

Custom Hard to Down.

Pens made of feathers were common in the seventh century, but so invertebrate was the old habit of writing with reeds on parchment and paper that it continued a long time after the first use of quills. The custom of carrying a pen behind the ear is ancient, as may be seen in the life of St. Odor: "He saw a pen sticking in his ear in the manner of a writer."

The Federal

Highway Council.

Good for the farms, good for the towns, good for the nation:—GOOD ROADS!

Every good road is a blessing to its locality. Where the roads are in good shape intercourse between the town and the country tributary to it is facilitated. Perishable products from the farm, instead of being left to spoil on the ground, can be brought promptly into town, and either utilized there or shipped away to find their market. The town has the benefit of increased trade from the farmers.

To these manifest advantages we may add the lessening of wear and tear on horseflesh, wagons and automobiles which good thoroughfares bring, and the prevention of a thousand annoyances.

Social and civic intercourse are also made much easier for the farmers. If they can reach their nearest town in ease and comfort they will make friends there, take an interest in its improvements and business and become members—and most valued ones—of the community.

A new body called the Federal Highway Council has just been organized to further the building of hard roads in all states of the union. It will act as an advisory council to state and local organizations, working in harmony with them and striving toward the same end.

It will back the Townsend bill now pending in congress, which appropriates $125,000,000 for national highways. This sum, if our legislators pass the law, will be used to further an improved system of roads for every state.

An excellent reason for carrying out this work at present is the amount of employment it would supply to returned soldiers and sailors. The benefits of this undertaking would be felt by every class of people in the nation.

Perhaps the best definition of classic is that given by Lowell: "Something that can be simple without being vulgar, elevated without being distant, that is neither ancient nor modern, always new and incapable of growing old."
